What is a 'Baghdad Battery'?

Most likely, the so-called "Baghdad battery" is just a scroll container. The scroll was meant to be wrapped around the iron rod, slid inside the copper tube, and then slipped inside the ceramic container, which could then be sealed to protect the scroll inside.

Who discovered the 'Baghdad Battery'?

The popular belief concerning the so-called "Baghdad battery" In around 1938 or thereabouts, the Austrian painter Wilhelm König, who was serving as an assistant to the leader of the Baghdad Antiquity Administration, discovered the object that has now become known as the "Baghdad battery" in the storage room of the Iraq Museum in Baghdad.

Did the 'Baghdad Battery' hold papyrus scrolls?

The objects found at Seleukia look almost just like the so-called "Baghdad battery," but we know they were, in fact, used to hold papyrus scrolls because they all contained remnants of papyrus scrolls when they were excavated.

Is the 'Baghdad Battery' an 'out-of-place artifact'?

König's battery hypothesis also, unfortunately, keeps getting repeated by people who I can only describe as "New Ager" who keep claiming that the so-called "Baghdad battery" is an "out-of-place artifact" or "OOPArt" and that it is evidence that there was a prehistoric civilization with modern levels of technology that we don't have record of.
