

Can Spain's green energy exceed demand?

Spain's green energy can exceed demand The patchwork plains of Castilla-La Mancha, in central Spain, were once known for their windmills. But now it is wind turbines, their modern-day equivalent, which are much more visible on the region's skyline.

How much energy does Spain import?

Spain's dependency rate on energy imports stood at roughly 74 percent in 2022, meaning that the country imported almost three-quarters of the total primary energy consumed, while only 25 percent came from domestic sources.

How can Spain and Portugal contribute to Europe's nascent battery ecosystem?

Batteries: With lithium reserves and access to low-cost renewable energy, Spain and Portugal have an opportunity to become major contributors to Europe's nascent battery ecosystem, from lithium mining and refining to battery cell production and assembly.

Does Spain need recharging stations?

Spain, with its wide expanses for a Western European country, faces the extra challenge of deploying recharging stations. Spain has 37,000 charging points, below the goal of 100,000 the government had set for now in 2021, according to ANFAC, the Spanish Association of Automobile and Truck Manufacturers.

Where are Spain's wind turbines located?

The 28 vast turbines of the Sierra del Romeral windfarm, perched on hills not far from the historic city of Toledo, look out over this landscape. Operated by Spanish firm Iberdrola, they are part of a trend that has accelerated Spain's renewable energy output over the past half-decade, making the country a major presence in the industry.
