

What is the future of nuclear power in Slovakia?

A big advantage for the future is that in terms of power level, the nuclear units located in Slovakia can be logically replaced by the new generation of small modular reactors without compromising the already deployed standalone energy storage systems.

Is nuclear energy a sustainable option for Slovakia?

To achieve the high standards of quality and safety associated with the fulfillment of this task, international cooperation and much higher national expenditures on research and development of nuclear engineering are necessary. Finally, from many aspects, nuclear energy seems to be a relevant and sustainable option for Slovakia.

What is the most valuable source of data in Slovakia?

The valuable source of data in Slovakia is the public opinion survey done for Nuclear regulatory Authority by the FOCUS agency in 2019. The opinion poll was done on a representative sample of 1026 Slovak citizens aged over 18 years. The most important conclusions found in the report are as follows.

Why is Slovakia implementing the National Hydrogen strategy?

Slovakia joined European Union countries in implementing the National Hydrogen Strategy to achieve a climate-neutral society by 2050. The National Hydrogen Strategy is a fundamental document that allows Slovakia to implement hydrogen technologies in its industry.

What is universal energy, then? It is the thing that makes up matter, and matter, in turn, makes up all we see and feel. Albert Einstein was the first to observe that everything is energy, noting that the idea we can shape our own realities was a fact about physics rather than a piece of speculative philosophy.. In addition, energy is eternal - it cannot be created or ...
